PEER 1

The paper is very clear and concise, I really like how you structured your review. Your stage, grade, age, educational need and learning space was laid out clearly in the beginning, you explain what anxiety is, link it to learning spaces and then state strengths and weaknesses as well as how teachers can be used as tools to help. There is no confusion with your paper and your project is viable in setting you up for the next assessment. I think you have a variety of research to back you up and you have a clear plan of what you are doing, the only refinement is to maybe include why you picked this topic. Overall you seem to know what you are doing and are doing it well.

PEER 2

Hi

Anxiety within young teens is definitely an important issue that you have covered well. You understand the impact that anxiety can have on students, both socially and personally. You have made clear the need to introduce and utilise collaborative activities, outlining the strengths of this learning space in relation to someone with anxiety.

My main concern with the learning space is the abundance of weaknesses. It may be worthwhile exploring how to gently introduce group tasks to a student with anxiety, rather than simply diving in head first. Overall, I like where you are heading with this prototype.
